A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on September 29, 2006 has been entered.

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

> The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claim 12 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

Applicant does not teach "(a) mixture according to Claim 1, wherein the sweetness and taste profile of said mixture does not significantly differ from the sweetness and taste profile of pure HFCS 55 on a quantitative descriptive analysis using 5 sensory descriptors." Specifically applicant does not teach that this applies to the full range of acesulfame K (0.015 to 0.035 wt%). The analysis is specific for 0.028 g acesulfame K.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

> (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 7-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Simon et al in view of Calderas et al (US Patent No. 6294214) for the reasons set forth in rejecting the claims in the last office action.

Simon et al disclose the combination of acesulfame K and high fructose corn syrup (HFCS), see entire document, especially Figure 11.

The claims differ as to the specific HFCS and the amounts.

Calderas et al disclose the conventional use of HFCS-42, HFCE-55, and HFCS-90 in combination with artificial or noncaloric sweeteners such as acesulfame (see entire patent, especially column 8, lines 42-65).

It is noted that the additives of claim 11 are optional.

It is further noted that the claimed amounts, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, are deemed a matter of choice and at most optimization. It is conventional in the art to manipulate sweetener blends to obtain desired results.

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to use the specifically claimed HFCS in that of Simon et al because the use and manipulation of HFCS in the sweetener art is conventional.

Applicant's arguments filed September 29, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that the claimed invention provides the sweetness and taste profile of HFCS 55, that the cited prior art generically cites the claimed components, and that hindsight reasoning was used.

Simon et al disclose the combination of acesulfame K and high fructose corn syrup (HFCS), see entire document, especially Figure 11.

Calderas et al are cited to teach the conventional use of HFCS- 42, HFCE-55, and HFCS-90 in combination with artificial or noncaloric sweeteners such as acesulfame in a beverage (see entire patent, especially column 8, lines 42-65).

The prior art clearly teaches the claimed components as conventional in the art. It is conventional in the art to manipulate sweetener blends to obtain desired results having a specific taste profile.

It is repeated that in the absence of a showing of unexpected results, the claimed components are used for no more than their art-recognized function to obtain no more than expected results.

In response to applicant's argument that the examiner's conclusion of obviousness is based upon improper hindsight reasoning, it must be recognized that any judgment on obviousness is in a sense necessarily a reconstruction based upon hindsight reasoning. But so long as it takes into account only knowledge which was within the level of ordinary skill at the time the claimed invention was made, and does not include knowledge gleaned only from the applicant's disclosure, such a reconstruction is proper. See In re McLaughlin, 443 F.2d 1392, 170 USPQ 209 (CCPA 1971).
